

The Association of Franklin Medal Scholars (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from The Association of Franklin Medal Scholars

The Franklin Medal, an honorary reward for the encouragement of scholarship in the free schools of Boston, derives its origin and name from Benjamin Franklin, the greatest and most famous of our native-born sons. For sixty-five years this token of honorable distinction has been annually awarded, by the School Committee, to a number of the most meritorious scholars in the highest class of each public school for boys, above the primary grade. The bestowment of this Medal, having for so long a period constituted one of the most interesting features of our system of public instruction, it has been deemed expedient to publish a catalogue of its recipients, with a sketch of its history, in connection with the present Annual Report on the subject of our schools. In providing for the establishment of this Medal, Franklin desired to evince the grateful recollection which he retained to the close of his life, of the benefit he derived from the Boston schools, and at the same time to furnish for all time, to the pupils in these schools, an incentive to stimulate them to make the best use of the means provided for their education. This Medal may be justly regarded, therefore, as a memorial of his constant and life-long affection for the place of his birth, while it has rendered him a sort of Patron Saint to Boston school boys to the latest generation.
